MONEY PRODUCES MONEY.

For instance--if New Mexico should borrow from outside the state $619,000 each year for 20 years at an interest of 6 per cent, the cost to the people at the end of the twenty years would be over $2,000,000. If instead, we could keep at home all of the $619,000, which, each year, is sent out of the state for insurance in excess of all the return to us in payment for losses, we would have saved over $12,000,000 to the state, the use of which would have been worth over $10,000,000. The difference between the debt in the first instance and the asset in the second would be that in the first we would have paid out more than $20,000,000, and in the second we would owe nothing and have $20,000,000 in hand. FORT WHIPPLE TO BE KEPT UP

Improvements Planned Before Troops Left Barracks to Care Takers, Are to Be Carried Out.

Fort Whipple, March 25.—Those who have been inclined to believe that Fort Whipple was to be abandoned through the appointment of a caretaker, and the dismantling of the structure to Fort Sam Houston, can be relieved of further anxiety through official news that has been received from Washington during the past few days, which discloses that idea. The war department has ordered that all construction under way be carried out as ordered, and to expedite work in all lines, twelve miles and two civilian engineers have been ordered to Fort Whipple, N. M., to the post immediately.

MANY AMERICANS HELD IN FILTHY JUAREZ JAIL

El Paso Times Interviews a Barber Who Was Arrested and Held Incommunicado in Dark Cell With Vermin.

El Paso, Texas, March 25.—The El Paso Times publishes the following concerning the conditions in the Juarez jail.

Not being confined for 27 hours in a small dungeon in the Juarez jail, Juan Barber, a barber of this city, was released and allowed to return to his own quarters yesterday. During the confinement in the dungeon, he was compelled to breathe the foul air of a dark cell whose dimensions were not more than 4 by 6 feet, the walls of which were wet with dirt and the whole interior of which was infested with vermin. He says he was not allowed to see daylight for the entire time and also that the position of food in a cell that had been used around the jail for passing this sort of message.

An account of his short confinement, which he later seemed to him to be an interminable time, Barber has continued to his room all day on Sunday morning. He and was only released yesterday for a few hours. He said the experience seems to have added years to his life.

He was arrested on Friday evening in the city of Juarez by a Mexican secret service man and turned over to a Mexican policeman who guarded him with a big revolver until he was taken into the incommunicado dungeon. After being taken there, Barber was kept in the cell for the night. He was released yesterday for a few hours. He said the experience seems to have added years to his life.

Barber says that on Friday evening he was arrested by a Mexican secret service man and turned over to a Mexican policeman who guarded him with a big revolver until he was taken into the incommunicado dungeon. After being taken there, Barber was kept in the cell for the night. He was released yesterday for a few hours. He said the experience seems to have added years to his life.

"The place was pitch dark and the air was something awful. I could not see where I was, neither could I tell in which direction the door was until daylight, when I became aware that the door had a small hole in it through which I managed to speak to Bluff, converse and a man named Wilson.

"Soon after I was thrown into the cell I became conscious of the fact that the floor was wet and before long I found that it was covered with dirt and the whole cell was infested with vermin. In order to prevent my knowing my brains out against the wall, I was forced to walk along the sides of the small dungeon with my hand on the wall at all times. I passed the place like a madman during the entire first night.

My morning I had gotten a chill from being confined in the awful hole and in order to get a little fresh air I instituted a process of knocking against what I found was the door and yelling 'Doctor! doctor!' as loudly as I could. This would bring the keeper, who would ask me what I wanted. By this means I was enabled to get a little fresh air during the day.

"The staff I was fed on was a kind of half description. In the morning, after spending a night in the place, a can was thrown in to me containing a mixture of cornmeal boiled in water and a tortilla, a piece of boiled beef head was thrown in later. The can in which this was given to me had been used to carry away the garbage and fish from around the jail. You can be sure I didn't eat any of that stuff.

"There are no sanitary arrangements in the hole, and no light or air. It would seem to me that if the Mexican authorities are going to continue to keep incommunicado for the regular period of time they could at least do so in a place that would not endanger the health of the prisoners for all time to come.

"Other Americans are in the jail besides Bluff, Converse and Brown. Some of them, such as Bruce Stevens and the like, know what they are in there for, but others do not. A Hollander, who is a naturalized American, has been there for ten days and another man in there by the name of Wilson, whom I think I heard being beaten because he refused to stand for the keepers turning the hose on him Sunday morning, is also there.

Last night United States Consul Edwards was called up by a Times reporter and asked about the two men mentioned, and he stated that he knew nothing about them but would proceed to investigate their cases today. He also stated that he had been expecting but had not received from the state department of the United States instructions to report on the conditions of the Juarez jail. He said that he would proceed immediately to report on the same as soon as his instructions arrived. He also said that he was not aware of the condition of the incommunicado cell. He also stated in this connection that he had not learned the names of the Americans captured at Casas Grandes in the battle of March 6, though they have been in jail there 15 days and reports say have not been permitted to speak with anyone or get out a letter from the jail.

RATON WANTS TO ARRANGE FOR BASEBALL

Letter to Sporting Editor of Herald Asks for Interested Parties to Attend Meeting of Fans.

The sporting editor of the Evening Herald has received the following letter from the Raton fans association and if the fans in the city expect to have a baseball team this year, it is high time they got busy. The letter should be taken care of by the authorities as Raton is desiring to put some real talent on the field this year.

Raton, N. M., March 24, 1911. The Albuquerque Evening Herald. Dear Sir: We understand that Albuquerque expects to maintain a strong baseball team this season. We, the fans of Raton, are desiring to put some real talent on the field this year.

Our experience in baseball for the past two seasons has been that by playing independent of each other we have found it difficult to secure a sufficient number of games to warrant the expense of running a team. But, however, we believe that by forming an association with six or eight clubs whereby a fixed schedule of games could be arranged, the greater part of the expense should be profitable to all concerned by us by doing more interest would be taken in the game by each place represented, and much else would be accomplished of a certain number of games each week.

In view of these facts we have arranged a meeting with the directors to take place in Raton on Sunday, March 26th, where we will discuss the situation thoroughly and discuss the best plans to be adopted for the coming season.

If Albuquerque contemplates having a team this year we believe that it will be to your advantage to have a representative at this meeting.

Very truly yours,
Raton Baseball Association.
FLOYD HANER,
Secretary.

SAYS NAP LAJOIE IS NOT HUMAN

Scout Marvels at Wonderful Ability of Seasoned Player: Nap Wants to Play Ten Years Longer.

New Orleans, March 25.—"I tell you, he isn't human. That fellow is made of stuff which the rest of us never possessed and never will possess."

The remarks emanated from Scout Sam Kennedy after watching Nap Lajoie go through training stunts in the afternoon and showing no apparent effect in the evening at Alexandria, La., with the team.

"Sam" said the first one to wonder at the wonderful construction of Lajoie's body. For years baseball cranks, critics and players have marveled at his powers.

When Larry went to Alexandria he worked as hard as the hardest worker in the squad. The day after the other men came with him complained of sore muscles, of stiff legs, of weak backs and the like.

"Feeling fine," was the only answer Larry could give when any one asked him about his condition.

Seems as though Larry never had to feel the training stunts like other players. Of course, he never threw a ball at full speed the first day, nor the second, nor the third. But other players also hold back. They don't take any chances until they think they are right. Yet they have sore arms and muscles which ache like a toothache.

Lajoie is no longer a youngster in years, that is, in the baseball years, but he is a youngster in feeling and a veritable glutton for work.

He is likely to be a glutton for life. He realizes that some day he will have to stop out to make way for some budding star, but he feels that the sad day is not an event of the near future.

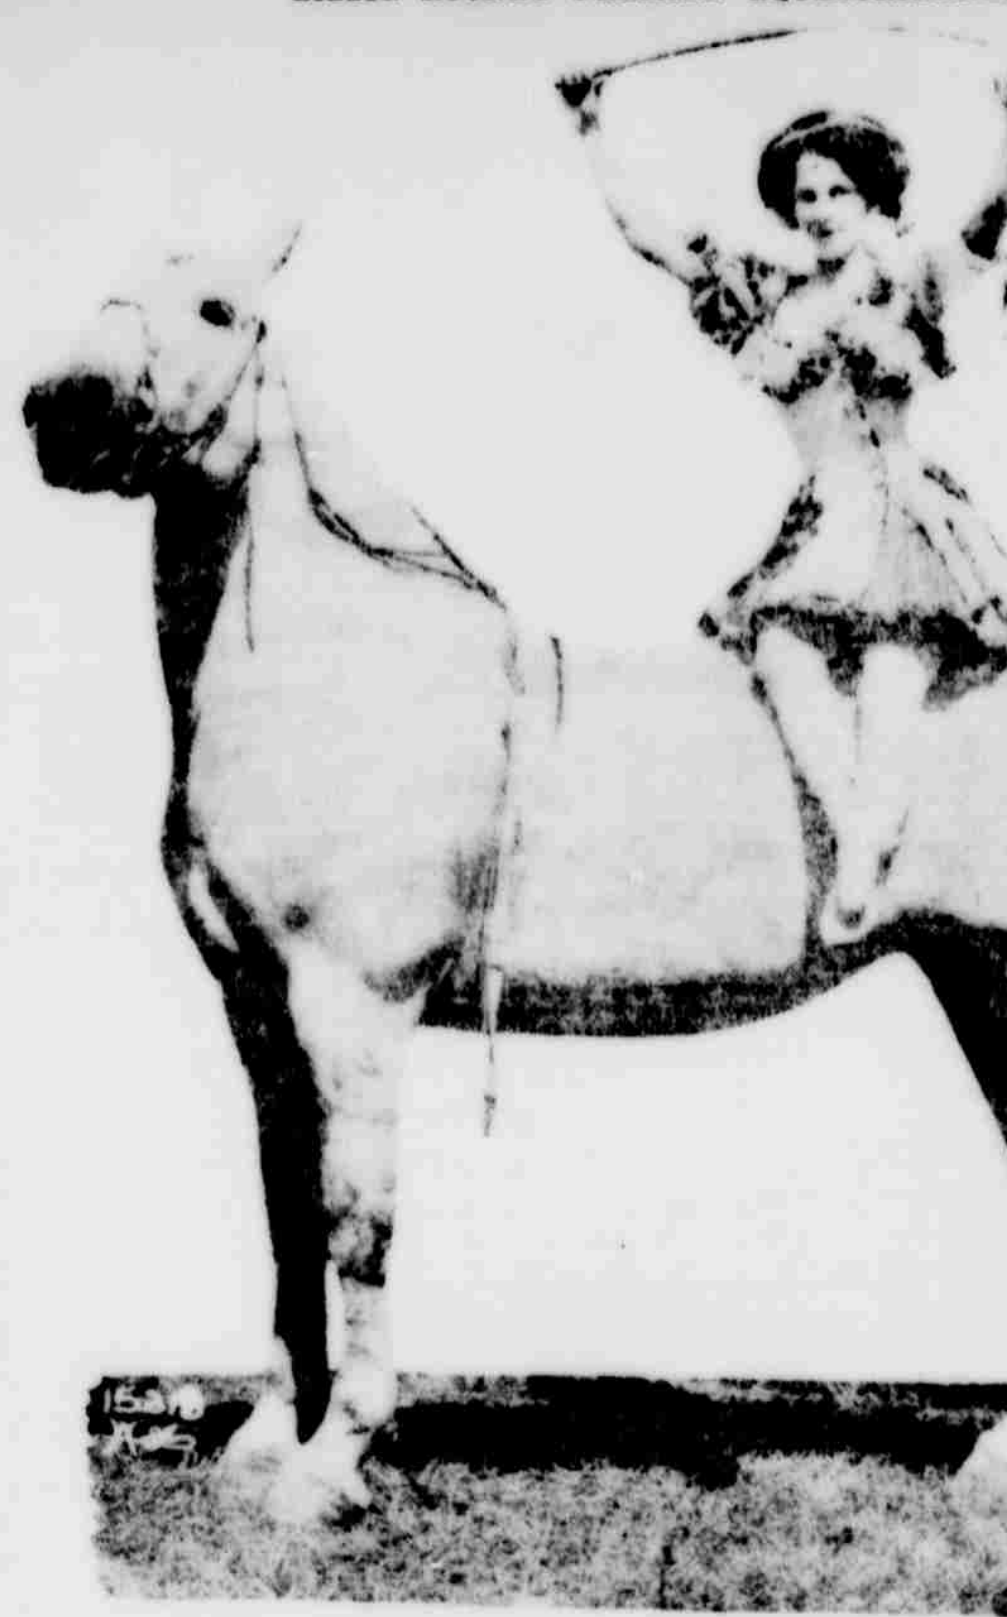

"Just give me about ten more years in this game and I will be satisfied," he said today. "Perhaps I may not live that long, but I think I will, and there is a lot of satisfaction in thinking so."

Just a glance at Larry tossing the ball around, hitting homers, hitting grounders in the infield and acting as though the efforts expended gave him a feeling of restlessness would soon convince the spectator that Larry has a fair chance to have his wish granted.

SWASTIKAS TO PLAY HIGHLAND

Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, the Swastikas and the Highland Glens will try conclusions at the fair grounds. Both teams have been putting in some strenuous spring practice, and a lively battle is looked for.

LIZZIE ROONEY PREMIER EQUESTRIENNE.

Just as an experiment the Sells-Floto circus will introduce bargain day prices both for the side show and concert during their visit here on April 1.

The admission price for each has been set at 5 cents merely for the purpose of trying out a cat-in-the-hat for the auxiliary attractions to the big show. Last year the Sells-Floto people cut the price of admission to the big tent in half, the movement being an unqualified success. Now they are going to make the same rule apply to the minor features. If the patronage here warrants it, the nickel figure will be retained all season.

To those who may linger on the circus grounds when the parade of the Great Sells-Floto shows return to the tents, it may appear that the mass of cages and dens of animals are placed indiscriminately in the menagerie tent, but this is not the case.

It is necessary for the purpose of the animal families that the arrangement be the same day after day. If the lion cage originally is first, the monkey cage next, the polar bear next, the seals next, the hippopotamus next, the camel next, the tiger next and so on down one side of the menagerie, the only equine animal navigator in existence. The Sells-Floto shows fighting the flames, the Rhoda Royal haute-ecole horses and a host of other attractions.

Don't forget that the price of admission is 25 cents. No more, no less.

OF INTEREST TO THE FANS

Arthur Irwin, scout, insists he can see the 1911 American league pennant floating from the Yankee park. Roll over, Arthur, you're on your back.

With Jim Callahan at pitcher and Jiggs Donohue on the job for first base, the White Sox roster looks like a page from the best performance chart.

Grover Land, Nap catcher, insists that long Tom Hughes is as good as over, and can't see why he was sent to the A. A. last year.

Birmingham, Nap outfielder, last year took advice on hitting and hit .222. Year before he was in the pen and hit .232. This year he left looking for tips.

Texas Jack Adams, catcher from San Antonio, is touted as another

Any change of order among the dens will promptly start something in the zoo.

When the Sells-Floto shows exhibit here on Saturday, April 1, the circus patron can obtain much interesting information by closely observing the menagerie.

You must not fail to see Foofio Carlo slide head downward from the dome of the tent. It is a dare devil feat never before attempted in any country. Then there is the balloon horse, the only equine animal navigator in existence. The Sells-Floto shows fighting the flames, the Rhoda Royal haute-ecole horses and a host of other attractions.

Don't forget that the price of admission is 25 cents. No more, no less.

GREAT WESTERN OPENS SCHOOL FOR EMPLOYEES

Education and Training Project It Is Believed Will Make Better Workmen and Improve Efficiency.

Kansas City, Mo., March 25.—One of the most notable progressive movements in modern railroading is that of educating employees. Railroads have learned that they benefit themselves by assisting employees and prospective employees to secure the training which makes their services valuable to the employer. In this connection the Chicago Great Western has established an educational department in connection with Corn Belt business college, Oelwein, Ia., to give young men reading along its lines an opportunity of taking at small expense a course in telegraphy and railroad science. Lectures on all branches of railroad work are to be given at intervals by officials of the railroads. A limited number of free scholarships to those who can provide good references are offered in addition to the regular courses.
